CANCELLATION/REFUNDS/WITHDRAWAL

If you withdraw from the course once it has commenced, you are liable for all outstanding fees to the year end.

THE TOTAL COST OF TRAINING

Ongoing weekly personal therapy which is likely to cost £40-£50 per session is a requirement of all programmes leading to professional registration and accreditation.

As soon as you start to gain client experience (usually from the second year of training) you are expected to be in supervision. Again this is likely to cost £40-£50 per session and you are recommended to obtain a minimum of 1 hour's supervision for each 4 client hours at the beginning of your practice. This reduces to 1 hour's supervision for each 6 client hours as you become more experienced. Sometimes the cost of supervision can be lower if you are working in a low cost public clinic.

Although the counselling course can be completed in 4 years and a psychotherapy course in 5 years, it is not uncommon for students to take time out before they complete the final examination. You will still have to maintain your personal therapy and supervision of client practice on some courses, and remain on the Metanoia register.

If you opt to do a BA/MSc along with a Diploma course then there is a registration fee and an additional course fee to cover double marking of written work, etc.

There are some miscellaneous costs such as personal liability insurance if you are practicing as a psychological therapist (likely to be around £70 pa), annual Metanoia registration fee (£40) and other professional fees.

In summary the total cost of achieving accreditation as a counsellor can be in the region of £15,000–£20,000, and the total cost of achieving a professional psychotherapy qualification can be in the region of £20,000–£30,000, and the total cost of achieving a professional counselling psychologist qualification is in excess of £30,000.

Fees are valid from 1st September 2011 until 31st August 2012.
